To Whom It May Concern:

I have worked with Pamela Wolf for the past school year at Rodriguez High School. Pamela is an English teacher and instructs students with a wide range of abilities. Pamela creates creative lesson plans and learning activities to help her students meet the state standards. She is able to push her students to achieve at a high level of academic performance.

Pamela has shown a great deal of dedication since she started at Rodriguez High School. Daily, she arrives early and stays late to prepare for her classes. She is always available to her students if they need extra English support, help with job applications and resumes, and help with projects. She makes herself available to her students before school, at lunch, and after school even though it is not required.

Pamela was hired at the end of November 2011, entering into an extremely challenging situation in which the classes had previously had multiple substitutes for almost three months time. She has shown that she has the patience and flexibility to be a successful teacher. She strives to challenge her students and pushes them to reach their potential. Pamela independently took classes in behavioral management, specifically directed at students of poverty, to better be able to provide instruction and accommodations to meet some of her students individual needs related to their current economic situations.

Pamela really cares about her students and does whatever it takes to see them succeed. She is constantly communicating with parents through phone calls home and emails. She also spends a lot of her time collaborating with other members of the English department and has designed relevant and meaningful literature units in conjunction with them.

I would recommend Pamela for another English teaching position. Feel free to contact me for additional information.

Sincerely,
